

TSA management, including Supervisory Transportation Security Officers, should maintain strict neutrality on the subject of unions. It is, however, the duty of managers and supervisors to correct any misinformation communicated by union representatives about TSA and TSO employment.

Representatives of individual unions and employee associations should be treated equally and free from discrimination.

We expect employees to respect these guidelines. We trust you will understand that we cannot compromise security to accommodate union activities. Therefore, employees who disregard these guidelines will be subject to corrective action. .

If you have any questions regarding union activities or these guidelines specifically, please contact your local HR representative.